Shortlisting

Candidates were shortlisted using their UCAS applications, written work, and contextualised GCSE score (where available). 672 applicants were shortlisted, which was approximately 2.8 candidates per offer made.

UCAS Application

Each candidate's UCAS application was marked on a scale of 1-10. Tutors assessed candidates on the basis of their qualifications and predicted grades, personal statement and reference. Each candidate's individual circumstances were considered when assessing their application.

The mean UCAS grade for all applicants was 7.0. The mean grade for shortlisted applicants was 7.8, and 8.4 for those who went on to receive an offer.

The distribution of grades was as follows:

<sup>1</sup> Figures for 'shortlisted' and 'offer' include a small number of candidates who initially applied for a joint honours degree, who were shortlisted or made an offer for English Language & Literature only.

Written Work

All candidates were asked to submit a piece of work as part of the assessment, usually a marked essay written as part of their normal school or college work. Work was marked centrally on a scale of 1-10, using the following criteria:

- Attention to the literary aspects of chosen texts
- Sensitivity to the creative use of language
- Evidence of careful and critical reading
- An analytical approach
- Coherence and structure of argument and articulacy of expression
- Precision in the handling of concepts and in the evidence presented to support points
- Relevance to the question
- Independence of thought

The mean written work score for all applicants was 6.8. The mean for shortlisted applicants was 7.2, and 7.6 for those who went on to receive an offer.

The distribution of grades was as follows:

Contextualised GCSE score (UK applicants)

The contextualised GCSE score provides information on how well an applicant performed at GCSE, given the performance of the school at which they sat their GCSEs.

For candidates who did not do GCSEs, or for whom it was not possible to calculate a score, the written work and UCAS grade were given more weighting during the shortlisting process.

UCAS grades, written work scores and contextualised GCSE scores (where available) were combined to create an initial grouping which put candidates in one of ten bands. The banding was then used to help shortlist candidates, with those who fell into the higher bands more likely to be shortlisted for interview, and those in the lower bands less likely to be shortlisted unless mitigating circumstances or contextual information suggested that their scores might not be an accurate reflection of their potential.

A number of candidates were reallocated to a different college at this point, to ensure that the ratio of shortlisted applicants per place was approximately the same at each college.

Interview

All shortlisted candidates were asked to attend interviews remotely via Microsoft Teams. At Mansfield, each candidate had one longer interview of 50 minutes.

The interviews centred on the candidates' written work, general reading and a piece of unseen poetry. Tutors looked for:

- Evidence of independent reading
- Capacity to exchange and build on ideas
- Clarity of thought and expression
- Analytical ability
- Flexibility of thought
- Evidence of independent thinking about literature
- Readiness and commitment to read widely with discrimination

A number of candidates were also interviewed at a second college, and a small number at a third or fourth college. Approximately 120 additional interviews took place. These interviews were carried out as part of the movement of candidates between colleges, from oversubscribed to undersubscribed colleges.

Offers

Offers were made to candidates who demonstrated the most potential to perform well on the course on the basis of their UCAS form, contextualised GCSE score (where applicable), submitted written work, interview performance and any other relevant contextual information. The list of candidates to be made open offers was agreed at a meeting of English tutors from all colleges.

26.3% of candidates who were made offers received their offer from a college other than their first-choice college.

Most candidates were made a conditional offer; for details of the standard offer please see the 'How to Apply' section of the English Faculty website.
